

Defining US

Teacher Reflection Questions: Middle School

Darion Allen: Power of the Mind

SEL Competency: Self-management

Darion exudes a positive attitude so that you would expect that he would be a joy to teach. What attributes can you see in the film that makes you think he is a good student?

Of the attributes you listed, how can these be developed in other students? Especially those students who require more attention and/or support?

Are your students optimistic? If not, what can be done in your classroom and/or school to help students become more optimistic?

What teaching skills are necessary for working with more self-motivated students like Darion?

Defining US

Teacher Reflection Questions: High School

Darion Allen: Power of the Mind

SEL Competency: Self-management

Darion exudes a positive attitude so that you would expect that he would be a joy to teach. What attributes can you see in the film that makes you think he is a good student? What strategies can you use to help your students develop greater optimism?

Are your students optimistic? If not, what can be done in your classroom and/or school to help students become more optimistic?

What teaching skills are necessary for working with more self-motivated students like Darion? How can you harness the skills of a student like Darion to support the learning of all students in your classes?
